Utilizing the Microsoft Edge API, RoundedTB enables you to round any edge of the Microsoft Windows taskbar at the expense of your display. As such, you can find the taskbar edge rounded every so often, and users will even be able to switch it on and off at their will. As such, the app enables users to blur the edges of their display for a minimum of 3 pixels. What users need to know While all users will be able to use this app, only those who have the proper permissions will be able to run any applications in a non-rectangular area. Because of this, users need to access the app using Edge, which is not installed by default. What's more, users also need to have the proper permissions to modify Windows' system files. Those are the only requirements to running the program. After you have those, you can change the taskbar shape from the app's UI, without ever having to physically open the task manager. It's an easy experience to use and a nice option for those seeking a tweaked taskbar. If you are looking to get away from the squared, boxy design of Windows 10, Rounded TB can adjust that to your liking. It's a barebones app that features two options and an "Apply" button, and that's all there is to it. In concluding this article, I would like to give a big shout-out to the App Store. Without it, I would have never been able to find RoundedTB in the first place. I found this app thanks to other users with their great reviews. If you like this review, why don't you give the App Store a chance? You will never regret it.
