Trump will deliver remarks at the White House at 5 p.m. ET, from which he will travel to the U.S. Capitol to deliver remarks on his planned agenda, including the transgender students order. Following Trump's remarks at the Capitol, his motorcade will depart and return to the White House for a 6 p.m. ET briefing with U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer and Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross on trade issues. Monday's visit to the Capitol will be Trump's first since he took office. He'll deliver a speech about the U.S. economy and the first 100 days of his presidency. In addition to the president's remarks at the White House, his schedule includes meeting with Acting Attorney General Matt Whitaker, Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross and Lighthizer. Trump is slated to fly to Nashville, where he will attend a $1,000-per-plate fundraising dinner hosted by Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam, the president's first official "pitch" since taking office. Trump will take the stage at the dinner at 7:30

A: The size of the file is 41.17 KB and not 41.16 KB. Also you cannot have a space in the URL when using Location: should be Q: Is there a way to create a layout using just HTML/CSS that can be opened in any browser? I want to create a website with HTML/CSS that should be displayable in any browser, even old and dinosaur ones (as long as they support HTML, CSS and JavaScript). By displayable I mean that it should be visually there, but not visual, which is what a layout is. Just something like the W3 School layout tutorial. I will then use JavaScript to load the layout via AJAX whenever the user clicks on a link. Is that possible? A: Yes, one way to achieve this is to use a "resizable iframe." Here's a great tutorial, written in 2005, on using a resizable iframe in an article on the BBC news website. A: Technically, it is possible but you have to take precautions to ensure the layout is done correctly for each case. I wrote a site that does this called You can choose the theme you would like and it will then use responsive styling. The best part of this site is it can be viewed in any browser! A: You could do this by making a "normal" HTML page and put a link tag on it using the data-layout attribute. This allows you to open a given layout in any browser by linking to a page that contains the HTML for the layout. Something like this: You could style the link accordingly to make it look like a button, like so: a { border:1

I see no post that could be the root cause...! A: Assuming "view.php" is where you are inserting the query into the database and that your db connection is successful. Change this: $db_username = "root"; $db_password = "root"; $db_name = "mydb"; $db_host = "localhost"; $db_port = 3306; To this: $db_username = 'user'; $db_password = 'password'; $db_name ='mydb'; $db_host = 'localhost'; $db_port = 3306; If you are using a different db name, please tell us which one. And there are some php error reported (see edit), it is difficult to identify the error, but i can try to help you here: Which is the line that is being executed. You can make a file and test, giving it your database connection details. '; error_reporting(E_ALL); ini_set('display_errors', 1); $db_username = 'user'; $db_password = 'password'; $db_name ='mydb'; $db_host = 'localhost'; $db_port = 3306; $db = new mysqli(mysqli_connect($db_host,$db_username,$db_password), $db_name, $db_port); if(!$db) { die('error connecting to database'); } $results = $db->query("SELECT Ciel,Paying,Date_gener,le_facteur,qc_réception,qc_mise_au_commerce,qc_dispo,qc_compte_majeur,qc_demande_majeur,qc_demande_b
