my design engineering course at Brixton Technical College. As usual, it has a mixture of CAD views and the command line. A few things I got wrong: The comments on the windows security prompts, so if you are prompted to "ignorance is no excuse", don't ignore it. If you do ignore it it's quite easy to lock yourself out in a hurry. I also admit that I did not activate the VBA for the options "bookmark" and "refresh". I should have mentioned that I had to fix the palette for the VNC client. I forgot to mention the rotary/spiral utility (Cortinas tool). I also forgot to mention that you don't need to use the MIRROR utility, and you don't need to have the HINT command. A general caution. If you do suspect that you are locked out, back up your data, because you can't get it all back. (Autodesk do not provide 'repair'. AutoCAD does not provide 'helpdesk' support on their forums. I had to read 3 or 4 threads to work out that there is no 'double-click timeout' because you have to get to the 'user preferences' menu first to change any of those settings! I would not have thought to look there.) AutoCAD A computerized drafting and design application used to create two-dimensional drawings of 3-D models. A drawing of a construction site can consist of a model of the ground, walls, a house, and various objects such as windows or walls. Such a drawing can then be used in conjunction with a coordinate system that indicates height and distance from an object to be moved, measured, or rotated. The schematic design stage is carried out with a 2D drafting and design program such as AutoCAD. This stage is concerned with the preparation of shop drawings or designs for construction. 648931e174
